There were many relatives and friends present and the floral remembrances were many and beautiful. The services were conducted by Rev. Edward S. Worcester. The bearers' places were filled by friends and burial was in Yantic cemetery. Rev.

Mr. Worcester conducted a committed service at the grave.

Mrs. MacDowell was the daughter of Thomas Billings and Julia Austin Billings and was born in this city 78 years ago. She was united in marriage with Conrad H. MacDowell, who passed away some years ago. Mrs. MacDowell is survived by a son, Conrad H. MacDowell of Norwich Town.

Professor William Colgrove. The body of Prof. William Colgrove, D. D., LL. D. of Tallahassee, Fla., arrived in New London Tuesday and interment was in the family plot at Cedar Grove cemetery.

Professor Colgrove was born in Lisbon, New London county, July 31, 1834, and was the oldest of a family of 11 children. His early life was spent on his father's farm. He soon developed a love for knowledge and studied closely.

At the age of 15 he taught in various places in Connecticut. New London included. While teaching he followed a course of private studies by which he was fitted for college. At the age of 22 he was married to Miss Catherine Waterman of Warwick, R. I.

Williams. In 1848 he attended a theological seminary at Whittentown, N. Y. After preaching for a while he taught in the Georgia seminary at Chester and, while there, James A. Garfield, destined to be a martyred president, was one of his pupils. He next established an academy at Beaton, Georgia Co. After three years' teaching at the Pierce academy, Middleboro, Mass., he took charge of the Rhode Island seminary at North Scituate and during that time he received ordination. He next went to West Virginia college at Flemington, W. Va., as professor of languages. After ten years he became president of that institution and held the position nine years. He was also pastor of a church at that place. While there he wrote and published his complete Scientific Grammar of the English Language, which is today used in many of the colleges and schools of the middle west. After four years spent in traveling he returned to West Virginia, where he taught a private classical institute for four years. The remainder of his life Professor Colgrove spent in writing and lecturing and at the time of his death had many unfinished manuscripts.

Professor Colgrove was a veteran of the Civil war. He leaves two sons in Worcester, George Day Colgrove and Francis Colgrove, a daughter, Catherine Amanda Sharpes, wife of Rev. A. N. Sharpes of Deer Park, Ill., a Baptist clergyman, a brother, John G. Colgrove of 111 Connecticut avenue of New London and a sister, Mrs. Richmond of New Haven.

Mrs. Aubrey Jarvis Treasurer. The name of Mrs. Aubrey Jarvis, elected treasurer, should have been included in the published list of officers of Norwich Home chapter.

REMINDER FROM HOME. Bulletin's Calendar With New Year's Edition Had Something for Providence Man.

To one former resident of Norwich, George M. Geer, The Bulletin's January 1st calendar brought a message of home affections when it reached him at his residence in Providence. The picture on the calendar was a nicely lithographed copy of a view of Norwich from the West Side of the river in 1849. In the foreground were two houses, one of which was built by Mr. Geer's grandfather and the other by his great-grandfather.
